Upland Council approves hike in refuse rates

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

The Upland City Council Tuesday unanimously approved a 33 percent hike in refuse collection rates in the city, effective retroactive to Sept. 1.

The increase will result in rates for a single family residence to go from about $3.60 per month to $4.80 per month.

The request for a rate hike from Western Refuse Hauling was the second in slightly under five years, and was necessitated by spiralling inflationary costs.

Western representative Bob McLeod told council members the areas particularly hard-hit by rising costs were fuel and upkeep for the

"We used to pay 51 cents for a gallon of gas," he said, "and now it's up to $1.13 a gallon.

McLeod included the results of an external audit report to show the company's current financial situation, adding that he found the request "justified.

Council members agreed that service was improved over that received in late 1978 when the previous rate hike was requested. Assistant City Manager Mike Matlock said the city had averaged up to 100 calls a month from dissatisfied consumers during that period, and tallies made in May and June of this year found no more than 15 complaint calls each month.

Action on the 1978 increase was delayed by the service complaints and a request by former Councilman Bill Bottin for further information on the firm's finances. In contrast, Tuesday night's decision passed with little incident, the only lengthy discussion resulting from mention of a five-year contract extension to be brought before council in the

The rate increase keeps Upland refuse costs competitive with other West End cities according to a study conducted by city staff, although Matlock said a minor adjustment in fee structure was suggested for multiple family rates. Charges for condominiums would also be adjusted, to be lower than the rates charged for single-family residences, and more than that charged for multiple-family residences.

Matlock pointed out that the consumer price index for the area has gone up 27 percent in all categories, and 36 percent in public transportation, which reflects the increased fuel costs also experienced by the refuse company

Former gang members gather last week by the recreation hall at Los Olivos in Upland for a Bible study session. They are part of what they call a growing movement in the barrio to exchange guns for God. Members of the group include, from left, Ray Caldere, Victor ramirez, Richard Duarte and Dave Dominguez. Services are to begin at 7 tonight at the center.

Growing barrio movement

Upland gang members find God

Staff Writer

Two years have passed, but it's the same place and the same man. Victor Ramirez used to meet his buddles by the Los Olivos Recreation Center in Upland where they would pool their cash and pick up a few drugs or a little booze to get high. It helped pass the time.

It's been more than a year, though, since he has and today Ramirez meets his friends to read the Bible and pray together. Last year at age 19 he accepted Jesus as his personal savior

Ramirez and his friends say they are part of a growing movement in the barrio toward religion and away from violence.

By the time I was 14 or 15, I was already tired of life," recalled Ramirez with a quiet smile. "I'd been picked up so many times - once I almost got locked up for five years for beating my dad up pretty bad - I finally decided the next time I was caught. I'd cause the police some trouble, get shot and end it all that way.

That was before July 19, 1979, when a strange man came to Los Olivos to preach about Jesus.

Me and my friends were hanging out here drinking, and after listening to him a while, well, my heart was really hurting and what he said sounded

'But I couldn't show that, so I tried to put him down, to argue with him. It didn't do any good.

Ramirez accepted Jesus that night and his life hasn't been the same since. The change is difficult for many of his friends to accept. He has been on probation for the past two years, and laughs when remembering the time his probation officer pulled a surprise inspection of his bedroom

He went down and got the detective, and pulled out the flashlights — they really ransacked the place. But all he found was Bibles and Bible tracts. The biggest changes have been internal. The barrio, at one point, could have been called his religion. He said older residents encouraged the younger ones to do anything to back up their barrio. To protect their name.

To make it known

Now he spends his days reading and studying the Bible, to make the Word known instead of the barrio. Ramirez nods at the circle of friends gathered around him. "Each one of us here is a miracle - that we're here. Ray Caldere at 28 is older than most of the others, and he found the Lord three years ago.

'I was still hanging around, causing mischief," he said. "These guys here, they had so many guns given to them, it was too easy. It got to be that you wouldn't just talk about killing a man, but how much damage you could do. How big of a hole.

Caldere said he had drinking problems, which would cause him to become violent and even beat his wife upon occasion.

Now, he finds other family members are confused and sometimes resentful of his "goodie-goodie" image since the conversion to a "True Believer, but he couldn't be happier.

Caldere is secure in his faith. He no longer carries health insurance for himself, his wife and three children, confident that they will be kept safe through diligent prayer and devotion. He is enthusiastic about the services set to begin at 7 p.m. tonight in the recreation center, and invites all those interested to attend - be they white, Hispanic or black. We are non-denominational," he said. "Not like a church. Everyone is welcome.

He is currently laid off from his job, he said, but finds spreading the word of God a 24-hour occupation in itself.

It is my duty to talk to other men and give them the news, and for those that think I'm not 'working,' well it's not a very easy job.

Dave Dominguez, 20, read the Bible while in jail, and after being released for the third time said he found a faith that stuck with him. He eagerly talks to other young men in the area about that faith, and says he no longer finds he needs the worldly things that were important to him at one time.

Although most of the members of their informal group are young men, there are some women involved and they predict the movement will continue to grow. For those that have not yet joined, Dominguez said they are just not yet ready. Richard Duarte bears a grotesque skull tattooed on his left arm, a souvenir of earlier days. The words "Jesus Saves" have been added to the knees of his jeans, carefully filled in with ball-point pen. It is that sentiment that is important to him now. Ramirez and his friends are convinced their movement is growing and will attract more of the young gang members whose only direction now is 'Just wait," said Ramirez. "I think you'll be seeing a real difference in this community. A real change as more people learn to know Jesus.

Hare Krishnas solicit donations, converts in Upland DMV parking lot

By JIM MARXEN Staff Writer

The young man stood outside the Department of Motor Vehicles office in Upland holding a stack of records under his arm.

What kind of records do you like?" he asked a man entering the office. 'Rock," the man replied. The young man made a check mark on what appeared to be a survey

'Do you like Seals and Crofts?" he asked, flashing one of the duo's records. "How about the Allman Brothers? What are you collecting for?" the man asked.

'A drug rehabilitation program. With more questioning, the man finally discovered the solicitor was collecting for the International Society for Krishna Consciousness.

The story is much the same throughout the state - DMV offices are often flanked by Krishna members seeking donations and potential converts. Offering popular records, many of which are "cut-outs" (records which usually cost between $1.99 and $2.99 in record stores), the group is able to raise money for its programs.

The catch is, however, unless a donor asks, the Krishnas rarely reveal the name of their group.

Members of the religious group who stand outside DMV offices are described as friendly, talkative and aggressive when it comes to explaining their ideals. Although their exuberance sometimes aggravates DMV visitors, the Krishnas are not considered violent and they will usually leave those who don't want to contribute alone. "I had a man come in here the other day with a stack of records under his arm," said Upland DMV worker Sandi Onfer. "So I asked him if he knew who he'd given money to and he didn't. He just said he'd made a good deal on the 'records, but when I told him he had given money to the Hare Krishnas, he was surprised.

Apparently others are just as surprised. One woman, who complained in a letter to the DMV, said a Hare Krishna asked her to contribute money for education. He did not, she said, inform her he was a member of the Krishna

'They say the money is for religious education," said Upland DMV assistant office manager Ben Maciel. 'It sounds pretty good and unless you really listen and hear what they're saying, you don't know who the money is go-

Maciel has watched the Krishnas outside his office for the past two years and has seen them change both their attire and their approach. They no longer wear the long flowing robes and have opted for more conventional street clothes

"The Krishnas are not readily identifiable the way they were before," Maciel said.

Members of the group carry identification cards which they show on request. The young man in Riverside was no exception.

Despite raising the ire of local residents (area DMV officials say they get about one complaint each day when Krishnas are outside) members of the group have remained peaceful and cooperative with most DMV officials. A spokesman for the Fontana DMV said he became involved in a brief confrontation with one member several months ago over where solicitations

"We didn't want her blocking traffic or standing in front of the door," he said. "She showed us an injunction that allowed her to be in front of the office so we let her stay. She stayed around for awhile and didn't really disrupt anything. "Yes, they generate a few complaints," said Pomona DMV office manager George Renz. "The public feels they are being harassed. Officials in the department admit they would rather not have anyone -soliciting funds in front of DMV offices but, they add, there is little they can do to stop it.

Last August the Krishna organization obtained an injunction from a federal court barring public agencies like the DMV from keeping Krishnas away from entrances to public buildings

Instead of forcing the Hare Krishnas off DMV property. Maciel places a sign in the window each time the group appears. The sign helps residents identify who they are giving money to: "Persons asking for donations on this property are not employees of the Department of Motor Vehicles (they are) Hare Krishnas.

An Upland Christian group is also attempting to inform the public where the money is going.

Margo Frantz, who heads the informal group, began her efforts in June and has made approximately a dozen trips to the DMV office to keep the Krishnas from soliciting the unwary

Forest vandals

Damage they do costs thousands of dollars a year

By RICHARD PERAZA Staff Writer

Not everybody who visits the nearby mountains goes for the scenery and fresh air; some go to rip and tear at forest facilities.

Vandals in the Mt. Baldy Ranger District leave a wake of rubble costing taxpayers thousands of dollars each year.

We haven't kept real close track of the dollars we've spent," District Ranger Don Stikkers, of the U.S. Forest Service, said. "We're in the range of $80,000 to $100,000 (per year) in this district to keep things

The district encompasses both the San Antonio and San Gabriel canyons, extending from San Gabriel on the west to Crystal Lake on the east, Stikkers said. Recreation crews working there know the signs of vandals well. "About 50 percent of their time is just repairing facilities that are damaged," he

The amount of vandalism goes up every year along with increased use of the forest, Stikkers said. He said San Antonio Canyon alone had 500,-000 visitor days last year. A visitor day is one visitor in the park for 12

Although all forests experience vandalism, the Mt. Baldy area is one of the hardest hit in the state because it's unusually close to urban areas, Stikkers said. "The same people doing vandalism in the city do it here too," he said.

Vandals in general are a lazy breed, Stikkers said. He said they usually do most of their handiwork along main roads and in camp sites and picnic grounds. They rarely venture into the wilderness. "Troublemakers usually don't like to go to a lot of effort," he explain-

Arson is one of the more dangerous forms of vandalism. "About a third of our fire starts are arson caused," Stikkers said. "Every year about this time it gets Signs are a favorite target. Small signs, he said, have a life expectancy of 2 days to 2 months and the large, carved entrance signs may last 1 or 2 years. Signs are torn up, shot down, painted over and just plain stolen.

"It's our main form of communication but it's difficult to keep signs up. Some people like to collect them," Stikkers said.

Gates sealing off fire-closed areas don't last long either and the locks on them are constantly shot or broken. "We spent $4,000 just on locks last year," Stikkers said.

Some visitors don't bother with locks, they destroy the gates. "A lot of people take great joy in putting a winch in (mounted on their recreational vehicles) and tearing them out." One fence, Stikkers said. was cut into pieces by a vandal with Rest rooms and camp stoves are common targets in the picnic and camping areas, Stikkers said. People pound away at both until only twisted wreckage remains.

Picnic tables are chained to concrete imbedded in the ground to keep them from being stolen but that doesn't keep them, and shingles from the rest rooms, from being cut up for firewood, the ranger said.

Target shooters are also a problem. "There are good ones and irresponsible ones," Stikkers said. They'll shoot at signs and trees; they'll shoot at trees until they shoot all the way through them. Shooters will haul television sets and furniture to the mountains for targets, then leave the bullet-ridden rubble when they're done, Stikkers

Because of that, and because persons are often wandering into the line of fire, the forest service is preparing a shooting management plan, Stikkers said.

"It's a real safety problem. We've had about three deaths from that,"

An area in the San Gabriel Canyon - Pidgeon Ridge - overlooks a river and is notorious for troublesome shooters, he said. "Shooters plink at the people on the river .... It kind of discourages use of the area.'

Persons with summer homes in the mountains don't need to be told about vandals, an estimated $8,000 damage a year is done to the cabins. Stikkers estimated.

There appears to be less vanadalism in fee areas than in free

Mt. Baldy District Ranger Don Stikkers inspects the forest service's strongest gate. Despite numerous bullet holes it's given nearly six months service - almost a record, he said. The secret is that it's made from thick plate steel pipe, the posts are locked into eight feet of concrete imbedded in the ground and the lock is shielded by armor plate. But its days are numbered.

Picnic tables don't have a soft life in the forest...within days vandals with knives cover them with more graffiti than a bathroom. Later someone else will probably chop it up for firewood.

Staff Writer

One commuter airline has initiated new service at Ontario International Airport and two others have announced plans to serve the air facility.

In addition, two similar airlines are expected to begin service at OIA before the end of the year, although they haven't yet filed application for the service, airport spokesman Dennis Watson reported.

Inland Empire Airlines began flights Aug. 1, said company sales representative Ann Burns. The new service includes three daily flights from Ontario, Burns said - two nonstops to Fresno and one nonstop to Visalia. Return flights are also in operation.

She said the airline, headquartered at Brackett Field in La Verne, is flying Swearinger Metroliners, which carry 19 passengers and a crew of two.

Trans-State Air, also headquartered at Brackett Field. is scheduled to begin flight service to several desert communities in October.

Selma Bassett, director of ground operations, said flights will begin at Apple Valley Airport, go to Barstow-Dagett Airport, return to Apple Valley, then proceed to Twentynine Palms, Ontario and Los Angeles International Airport.

Five round-trip flights a day will follow this route, Ms. Bassett said. The flights will be made in a Cessna 402, which carries nine passengers and two crew members. "This airline belongs to the desert community," qi Bassett said. "Our theme is 'in the spirit of community aid interest and pride.' Mark Harmon, vice president of Imperial Airlines, lo headquartered in Carlsbad, said that on Oct. 1 the airline will inaugurate 14 flights a day from Ontario to Loss: Angeles International Airport and return.

"The future looks very, very good in the Ontario" market," Harmon said. "We're eventually looking at routes from Ontario to San Diego and Las Vegas.

Program offers brain-injured people new hope

There's new hope for certain brain-injured individuals to return to independent living in their communities as a result of a program developed at Casa Colina Hospital of Rehabilitative Medicine in Pomona.

The new program, the brain injury transitional housing community, was announced recently by Dale Eazell, president. The innovative project is designed as a transitional living situtation for individuals not yet ready for independent living, but whose continued confinement to institutional facilities is an impediment, reports Don Joyce, program director.

This program which began in late June is the first of its kind in the United States," Joyce said. "The key difference between our new program and existing residential programs for brain-injured people is our emphasis on continued treatment.

"There is a severe lack of treatment programs available to our community and the United States for brain-injured persons," he continued. "These individuals many times have intellectual and behavioral deficits that prevent them from living independently or semiindependently in the community.

'Consequently, many of these people are placed in institutional facilities or maintained unproductively at home. If given adequate treatment and supervision, these individuals can learn to live at a more responsible adult level in their community.'

The program focuses on emphasizing resident potential in several areas such as the following:

Pre-vocational skills, including training and guidance in skills necessary to return to the competitive employment market;

Community reintegration including identification, location and utilization of available community resources such as public transportation, public buildings and appropriate leisure resources;

- Daily living skills including planning and preparation of meals, cleaning and home maintenance, dressing, grooming and hygiene, money management and communication;

Social behavior including social skills, peer relationships, group situations and community social

- Leisure skills including adapation and/or learning

"We feel strongly that resident progress in these areas can only be facilitied within a structured program that provides 24 hour treatment and supervision," Joyce said. The program is staffed by houseparents specifically trained for this program and the multi-disciplinary clinical treatment staff of Casa Colina Hospital.

The program is not for all brain-injured people, Joyce pointed out. "This type of program is geared to the needs of a specific sub-group of brain-injured people. These are those who have been evaluated and determined to have a significant potential for more independent living in the community and possible to return to gainful employment, he added.

Formal re-evaluations are held monthly to identify resident progress toward established goals and objectives. There currently are three residents in the program with referrals and inquiries coming in daily from all parts of the country.

"This program will provide a sound model for delivery of service to the community so that similar programs can be developed for brain-injured persons throughout out nation," Joyce said. "In the future, we plan to expand the program by opening more residences," he concluded.

Court Reporting

Court Reporting is a lucrative and exciting career and Chaffey College's court reporting program is always wellattended.

Persons who are interested in becoming court reporters must take the college's entry test which will be given on Thursday, August 28 at 8

New and potential court reporting students must take tests in finger dexterity, English, typing and reading. According to Lou Gurich, who coordinates the program, many students are unaware that they must take this test before enrolling in courses.

Approximately 70 percent of all students from Chaffey College who take the California Certified Shorthand Reporters test pass that test the first time. The state average is approximately 20 percent. This is one of the reasons that the Chaffey College program is so popular, Gurich said. The court reporting entry test will be given at 8 a.m. on Thursday, August 28, at the Rancho Cucamonga Vocational Skills Center, 9375 Feron Street. For more information, call the Skill Center at 987-2735.

Politics The candidates are coming and the rhetoric is flowing. Can you keep up with the pace? Chaffey College will offer an opportunity to learn about the political process through direct involvement. In Social Science 110 students will experience first-hand partisan politics and can earn college transfer credit. Learn about party headquarters operations, precinct organization, publicity techniques and drafting of press releases.

The students will become involved in aspects of a political campaign such as voter registration, distribution of campaign literature, fund raising and office tasks. The student may choose to participate at the gubernatorial, congressional, state senate, assembly or county supervisor level.

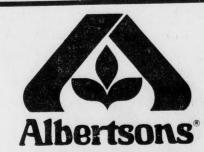

This class will meet Fridays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. or 6:10 to 10 p.m. Tuesday evenings. Both sections will require additional field work to be arranged.

Any area resident 18 years or older or holding a high school diploma is eligible to attend Chaffey College. Applications are available at the Alta Loma campus, 5885 Haven Ave., and the Satellite Learning Centers: the Fontana Learning Center, 17220 Merrill Ave.; the Corona-Norco Education Center, 5th and Hamner in Norco; the Chino Learning Center, Chino High School, 5472 Park Place; and the Rancho Cucamonga Vocational Skills Center, 7395 Feron Ave. Registration is on Sept. 4, 5, 8 and 9. For more information about this class or any other tuition free class please call 987-1737.

And according to the Census Bureau, the number of single-person households will continue to increase dramitically. They project that by 1990 more than onequarter of all households will consist of only one per-

Why are some single householders deprived of a nutritionally sound meal? In a series of interviews with single people of all ages and backgrounds, Betsy Robertson, consumer adviser for the National Food Processors Association tried to find out.

"I can't be bothered cooking for myself," said one New York City bachelor. "I try to eat a good lunch and then at night I may pick up an order of spare ribs and fried rice from a Chinese restaurant and have a doughnut or ice cream for dessert.

"With the wide variety of canned and other ready-toeat foods available, dining alone need not result in a poor diet," says Robertson. She discovered that those she interviewed who planned a bit and shopped for food once a week had a reasonably well-balanced diet.

"One man I spoke with, a salesman from Des Moines, relied on some prepared foods and usually mamaged to put together a good meal in a half hour without doing a lot of fussing," says the NFPA adviser. He might heat up a can of chili, then add chopped raw onion and grated cheddar cheese or slice a couple of frankfurters and heat with a can of baked beans. Once a week he makes a meat loaf and then reheats it. Every night he creates a salad (his avowed speciality) that includes lots of fruit or vegetables. One favorite warm-weather combo includes romaine lettuce, canned mandarin oranges and slivered almonds in a vinaigrette dressing with a teaspoon of honey added.

"You would expect that women living alone are able to cook for themselves, says Robertson. "However inter-

"Chilled consomme madrilene is a delicious, low-calorie product that only requires a can opener to 'prepare' it. Beef bouillon with a slice of lemon floating on top is also low calorie but elegant."

Main dish salads are only a can opener away if you keep salmon and sardines chilled in the refrigerator. Marinated mushrooms,

Bonita lunch costs rise

The cost of student lunches served in Bonita Unified School District schools has been increased by 10 cents for the new school year.

Prices at elementary schools will be raised from 55 cents to 65 cents; at intermediate schools from 60 cents to 70 cents; and at high schools from 65 cents to 75 cents. Cost of the intermediate school combination lunch will be raised from 75 cents to 85 cents.

Dr. James Overin, assistant superintendent, said the increases are necessary because food and supply costs increased by 19 percent last year. He added that utilities and other operating expenses continue to increase.

Overin said the new prices compare favorably with those being contemplated in surrounding school districts.

Retirement planning

Citrus College will offer two sessions of a six-meeting, noncredit course of special interest to persons who are beginning to plan for retirement. ### Let's Talk

Honesty key to friendship with people

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN Copley News Service

Following a long session of counseling with a man who thought himself devoid of friendship, I boiled down all I knew to find the formula for friendship. In essence, it is to be honestly yourself.

When you are a truly authentic person, and honestly place yourself face to face with someone who has the same interests, and are sincerely of a like mind, there cannot help but come out of the relationship a real friendship. Apply this to your lifestyle and you have the basis for forming lasting and deep relationships that will be strong friendships all of your life.

Now underline the words, "common interests," because common experiences and mind form the bridges over which personalities can exchange commitment which makes deep and lasting relationships possible.

The question then arises as to how this is to be done. "I am very shy." "I do not make friends easily" or "I have been a loner all of my life." If you decided to work for your political party, in a service club, or in your faith, you raise your hand and say that you would like to have a job, and you will be inundated with offers, possibilities and opportunities you would not dream exist standing on the outside Friendship circles form slowly. As warmly as the newcomer may be welcomed, it is only human nature to put that person on probation. If such a person proves to be an interloper, archly forcing their way in too rapidly, they are just as likely to be frozen out. Friendship is a letting down of the walls between people. If this person newest on the scene cannot be trusted without sensitivity that comes with friendship, then the walls are rebuilt.

If one proves to be good-natured, industrious, and willing to be open, and if they play the waiting game with skill and patience, and show that they are not a judgmental or bitter person, friendship will not be long in

Most people I know use the average number of platitudes and predictable routine remarks, and once in awhile there is marvelous pun that is shared between us. After a good deal of reflection I have concluded that smart society is really pretty much of a myth.

Consider that the really great writers describe ordinary folk. The acknowledged ageless painters put on canvas familiar scenes. The eloquent orator comes back to the people for inspiration and guidance. It is a marvelous thing to have a friend, but you have to allow that person to be authentically their own self. Sharing honestly, without the pretense, forms the bonds which make up the cable of honest friendship, even sharing and friend." Be what you want to find, and you will soon find

Woman owns keepsakes

of her American heritage

By MARGE GROSS Staff Writer

When social conversations turn to a discussion of heritage, Giles and Muriel Lewis Van Vorst can brag about being descendants of American pioneers

Van Vorst is a descendant of Gerrit Janzen Van Vorst, who settled in America before 1639. He is a 10th generation male descendant, which enabled him to become a member of the Holland Society of New York in March of The society is limited to 1,000 male members, who are in direct line from residents of the Dutch Colonies in America before 1675," he said. Van Vorst was a resident of Schenectady, N.Y., before coming to Upland.

Muriel's line of heritage through her father goes back to Francis Lewis (1713-1803) of New York, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence

Giles has a large certificate of membership in the Holland Society to show, but Muriel has her grandmother's wedding dress, which she can just about squeeze into for modeling.

The handmade dress came from Stewart's Department Store in New York City, and was worn by Henrietta Jame Standen in 1874 when she became the bride of Frederick L. DeGraw in New York. Lwas my grandmother's favorite since I was her first grandchild, so when I visited her in Tom's River, N.J., she would give me keepsakes," Mrs. Van Vorst said. The most prized keepsake is a wedding gown of rich, brown taffeta with a fitted bodice, bustle back, high neckline and a skirt with a drape in front over pleats and full back. Mrs. Van Vorst has the poke bonnet of rippl-ed soft straw and brown taffeta chin sash. The Upland woman also has a gold cross with seed pearls which was given to Henrietta Jane when she was confirmed on March 29, 1872, in St. George's Episcopal Church in New York Another treasure Muriel Van Vorst keeps in a big trunk is a little doll trunk and "Edith."

"Edith" is Etta Caroline DeGraw Lewis' doll. Etta was Henriett's daughter and Muriel's mother. In the little trunk is a complete wardrobe for "Edith" made by Henrietta around the 1890s Folded neatly is a white sailor dress, nighties, gingham aprons and several dresses. There are stockings, tiny shoes and a little hat.

Grandmother saved the doll and her trunk so I could have 'Edith' to play with," Muriel said as she looked at an apron she had sewed for the doll.

Then Muriel Van Vorst brought out "Edith" - poor "Edith" is in nine sections. "Her elastic wore out," Mrs. Van Vorst said with a sad look in her eves

The doll's arms, legs, hands, feet and head had been held together with tight elastic so "Edith" could move

This is Henrietta Jane Standen in her wedding gown before her marriage in 1874 to Frederick L. DeGraw. The dress was made by Stewart's Department Store in New York and was later given to Muriel Van Vorst, her favorite granddaughter. Henrietta had five children before her husband deserted her. She raised the family in Tom's River, N.J.

at all joints. Mrs. Van Vorst plans to have the bisque body put back together, the porcelain head face cleaned and will buy a new wig for "Edith.

"Her hair was all tangled, so I took my child's scissors and cut it," she said as she placed a short, uneven and chopped wig of hair on "Edith.

"I think I'll get 'Edith' a red wig ... there were lots of redheads in my family," Muriel Van Vorst said as she repacked the little trunk, folded the wedding dress and

Any way you look at it, for a bicycle, that's traveling. Such speeds by human power, however, are grow-

They shattered world records in both single and tandem events with speeds of 56.66 mph and 62.93 mph respectively. And in the endurance event there, the Vector vehicles also finished first, recording a speed of 46,3 miles in one hour.

These Vector vehicles are molded of fiberglass and plastic. They use many standard bicycle parts, including the wheels, and have a six - speed power train featuring a special 100 - tooth front chain ring designed to product 60 mph at 100 revolutions per minute of peddle rotation in the top gear. Such self - propelled speed machines, granted, are the play toys of the energetic and the daring. Feel The OWOf Success -Use The Want Ads

September 4, 1980 Woman should communicate her sex needs

By ZENIA CLEIGH

Copley News Service SAN DIEGO - Many modern women who consider themselves liberated, intelligent professionals still are in the Dark Ages of communication is how it sexually, according to a is done. Being helpful, as therapist who says this is due to their inability to communicate exactly what they want.

Instead of taking responsibility for their own fulfillment, many women cherish a fantasy that a man will come into their lives and will take over, sexually leading the way.

This attitude leaves a man "on the proving ground" and turns sex into work, says Dr. Theresa L. Crenshaw. A medical doctor who trained with the famed Masters and Johnson sex therapy team in St. Louis, she said between 50 and 60 percent of most marriages are sexually dysfunctional, or about to

The problem with expecting bells to go off while the man does all the work, as Crenshaw puts it, is that this is the kind of behavior a man feels most threatened by and, consequently, he is less likely to be able to perform.

When this occurs, "Sex becomes more of a power struggle than an erotic experience.

Crenshaw, a graduate of the University of California Medical School at Irvine, said that sex becomes satisfying when the woman develops the ability to initiate and participate in sex, and where the relationship is comfortable so no blame is placed when things don't work out.

"A relationship is very crippled when people can't communicate with one another and share what is right for them (sexually) without it being taken as a personal insult," Crenshaw said. This is one of the major obstacles to a happy sex life, even with couples who have long - standing relationships.

'What's interesting is that couples will talk about sex over a cigarette afterward, but even those who consider themselve open won't talk about it at the time.

"It's a lot more difficult for the woman than the man. Often she doesn't know what she wants. And all her training goes against it. She's not supposed to know about sex because he'll wonder where she found out. And she fears it will hurt his ego.

Intellectually realizing what needs to be done is the first step toward learning how to communicate in bed, Crenshaw said.

The next step might be to talk to the man in a nonsexual setting and ask him how he would feel if she told him what to do in bed.

"Then," Crenshaw said, "she simply has to plunge in and do it.

Some men are threatened by a woman's suggestions in bed, Crenshaw said, but most men appreciate the advice.

"It's amazing how much of a relief it is to a man when he realizes he doesn't have to figure it out without her help." she said.

The variable in this kind opposed to critical, is a key.

"If the woman says, 'You're being a klutz,' it's likely to hurt his feelings,' she said.

Another point, Crenshaw said, is that many women know what they want their man to do to satisfy their emotional and sexual desires, "but they'll be darned if they'll tell him because it takes all the romance out of it.

'They'll tolerate getting fishing poles for Christmas rather than say, 'Here's what I've really been lusting after.' Women get improperly angry with their men for not reading their minds, and they take the same approach in bed. 'I've got some ideas,' they say, but I'm not even going to tell you about it. I can outwait you.

It helps, too, Crenshaw said, to plan and set aside time for sex.

'If you have some candlelight and music and you're more rested and relaxed, you'll be more turned on than if you are in curlers and an old ratty gown.

Here is Crenshaw's list of the five most important things to remember about

- Recognize that you are the world's authority on your own sexuality. Trust yourself and begin behaving that way

- Communicate your needs and desires at the Pay attention to and give forethought to your sexual experiences. Plan prime time.

- Be psychologically and physically comfortable. Turn off the television, take the phone off the hook, lock the door.

- Take the risk to be vulnerable. Keep in mind that he or she is your best friend, and drop your defenses.
